US Reaches Yalu

The saying that bad news travels fast is illustrated by the weatherman's forecasts. He's sometimes wrong about tomorrow being fair and warmer — but if it's rain, sleet and snow and colder, he never misses.

You wonder if General MacArthur isn't being a bit on the optimistic side when he tells Americans troops in Korea, "Clean up everything this side of the Yalu river and you can go home for Christmas."

The Yalu marks the boundary between Korea and Chinese Manchuria, and our arrival on the river bank means the liberation of Korea is complete. But who will patrol the river to discourage Chinese or Russian neighbors from mounting a new guerrilla attack?

MacArthur apparently meant, in his message to America's troops, to sharply divide the Korean job. Up to this time it's been 90 per cent a U. S. operation. We kick the invaders out. But from here on it has to be a true United Nations business.

"Mac" is going to pull back U. S. troops in favor of the soldiers of other United Nations lands — and he's going to insist on it.

The United Nations will have to face it.

And on prompt support of MacArthur's words may well depend the entire future of the U. N.

125 Attend Timber Meet at Ellis Farm

B. J. Ellis showed more than 125 farmers, businessmen, timber men, and agricultural agency representatives the farm forestry practices underway on his farm near Baird's Chapel yesterday afternoon.

Extension Farm Forester, Bob Nelson, who has advised Mr. Ellis with his farm timber problems for about five years assisted in giving the details of the farm forestry practices used on the farm.

Nelson in his talk to the group stressed that farm forestry was 90 per cent common sense and could be carried out by any farmer with a little help from a forester. At the first stop on the management tour it was pointed out that with proper cutting and good fire control natural reseeded would take place.

At the next stop a pulp wood thinning area was observed. It was thinned in 1948 and has been marked for the second thinning this year. About 10 cords of pulp wood will be removed in the two thinnings. A full stand of better trees have been left to produce future saw log cuts.

Harold A. Howell, Extension Forester from Little Rock, pointed out to the group that it required on the average of 27 trees six inches in diameter to produce one cord of pulp wood and that each of these trees would have a value of about 7 cents. It would require only 8 trees nine inches in diameter to produce a cord of wood and these trees would have a value of 25 cents each. With 12 inch trees only four are required to produce one cord of pulp wood and a value of 53 cents per tree. Twenty of the same size trees will produce 1000 board feet of logs and have a value of $1.50 each. Only two trees 15 inches in diameter are required to produce a cord of wood. Eight will produce a 1000 board feet of logs. They have a value of 88 cents and $3.63. Mr. Howell pointed out that these figures proved that proper harvesting and marketing was important to secure the most value from the land.

Mr. Ellis pointed out that over the past 15 years he has averaged cutting 300 board feet of timber from each acre of his land. His farm records show that his timber land has produced an average annual income of $5.32 per acre for the past 15 years. At present prices this same stumpage would have a value of over $10 per acre.

Modern fire control methods as used in this area were demonstrated and explained by Euster Denton of Delight, District Forester, Division of Forestry and Parks, Arkansas Resources and Development Commission, who emphasized that fire prevention was the first must in fire control. A tractor mounted fire plow and other modern tools used in timber fire control were used by Mr. Denton who is in charge of the use of these tools in assisting timber owners in fire control and prevention. Mr. Denton said that Mr. Ellis's farm forests showed that where there was interest forest fires could be controlled.

The tractor mounted tree planter recently secured through efforts of Hope Chamber of Commerce was demonstrated for the first time by John Keck and Jim Case, Soil Conservation Service representatives. The mechanical planter has a reported capacity of 12,000 trees per day. This machine will be available for tree planting during the coming season.

Dewey Demands Resignation of Rail Trustees

New York, Nov. 25 — (AP) — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey demanded last night that the two trustees of the bankrupt Long Island railroad resign by Monday to speed a total shakeup of the commuter line.

Seventy-seven persons died and 332 were injured Thanksgiving eve when a speeding Long Island express ran through two signal lights and plowed into the rear of another train, telescoping two crowded passenger cars.

Dewey said the trustees, David E. Sucker and Hunter L. Delatour, had lost public confidence. He threatened court action if they did not quit by his deadline.

It is our unanimous opinion," Dewey said, that the road is bankrupt financially, as well as being bankrupt in equipment and management.

The miserable conditions of the trains and the bad operation are basically the result of demoralized personnel and total bankruptcy of the road, both spiritually and physically.

The two trustees, both experienced railroad men, hold their office under appointment by federal Judge Harold Kennedy, who is supervising the road's reorganization in bankruptcy. Judge Kennedy attended the conference, but made no public comment.

Dewey said that if the trustees don't step down by his deadline, that the state, the city, and two suburban counties will go into court to seek their ouster.

He called the resignation essential so swift action can be taken to install a new management. "The conference discussed possible ownership of the line, which carried 300,000 passengers to and from New York City daily.

The conference was a preliminary to five independent probes that will try to get to the bottom of the disaster. These five will be made by the government's interstate commerce commission, the state public safety commission, a mayor's fact-finding committee, the Queens county district attorney, and by the railroad itself.

Mayor Impellitteri, who like Dewey cut short a post-election vacation after the wreck, was bitter in criticizing the huge Pennsylvania railroad, owner of most of the Long Island's stock.

GOP Launches Broadside at Acheson

Washington, Nov. 25, —(P)—Republicans brought President Truman directly under fire on for sign policy today as they launched a new critical broadside at Secretary of State Acheson.

Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) of the conference of all Republican senators told reporters he holds Mr. Truman directly responsible for what the senator said are bad policies that need weeding out.

Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa), a foreign relations committee member, said in a separate interview that he blames the President primarily for blunders which involved the United States in the Korean war.

In Omaha, Senator Wherry (R-Iowa), senate minority leader in the present congress, said that the most important job confronting the new 82nd congress will be Acheson's removal.

Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.), who has a record frequently with Acheson, contended that the secretary is in a difficult spot, "adding, however, that I don't know anyone who would do better."

Kefauver said he thinks Acheson's critics should recognize the President's right to pick his own secretary of state and let the country get on with its knitting.

Senator Douglas (D-Ill.) called for a new era of good feeling, "saying that he thinks lawmakers who differ on policy ought to be able to do it in friendly fashion without in a discriminate smearing."

The new Republican attack on the President and Acheson came after Philip C. Jessup, Acheson's chief adviser, told a Philadelphia audience last night that some GOP criticisms of the administration's policies point straight in the direction of a policy of embarking on war.

He apparently alluded to demands by Senator Knowland (R-Calif.) and others for increased military support for Chinese Nationalists on Formosa.

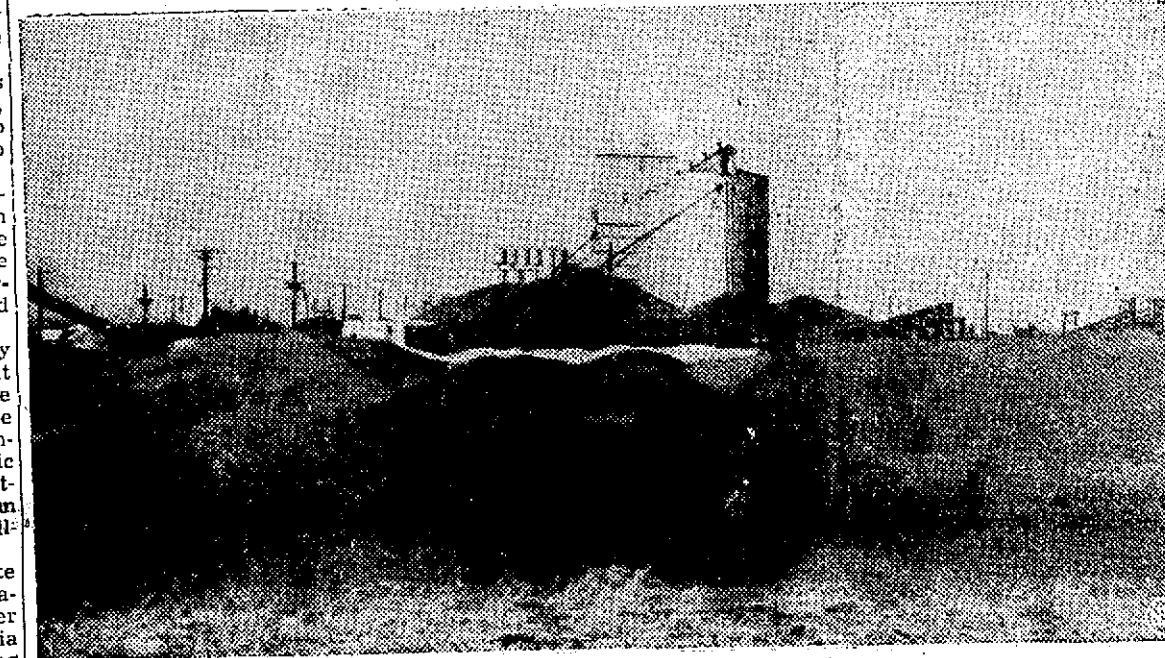

Jessup said if the policies of some critics were carried out they would involve the U. S. in a full-scale war in Asia. He added that was the sort of trap the Communist imperialists were preparing.

There are thoughtful people in this country who would have us fall into that trap," he declared.

To this remark, Millikin reported: "Aren't we in a trap already?"

10 Accused of Contempt Plea Innocent

Washington, Nov. 24 —(P)—Ten persons accused of contempt of congress for refusing to answer questions of the house un-American activities committee pleaded innocent today.

They appeared before U. S. District Judge Burnita S. Matthews, who gave defense attorneys until Dec. 19 to file motions.

Those arraigned included an heiress, an official of the Communist Daily Worker newspaper and seven officials and members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. They were indicted by a federal grand jury here last Monday.

After the arraignment the "UE defense committee" issued a statement calling the indictment of the seven UE members "another step in the plan to silence the American people and destroy their fighting organizations."

The defendants had prepared in advance to post bail. Judge Matthews set bail of $1,500 in all but one case — that of a Washington, D. C. resident, which was fixed at $1,000.

One by one, the 10 marched before the judge and said "not guilty."

David Scribner of New York, general counsel of the UE, objected when Judge Matthews suggested Dec. 12 as a trial date.

He told the court that "very serious legal questions — questions not ultimately determined by the Supreme court," were involved.

The judge then gave all defense attorneys until Dec. 19 to file any motions they may desire.

Among the 10 defendants was Louise Branstetter, Berman, described by members of the un-American activities committee as a "financial angel" of some Communist projects. Mrs. Berman, now living in New York, inherited a West Coast fortune estimated at more than $2,000,000.

There Are 110,000 Puzzled Officers, Men Making War in Corner of North Korea

By HAL BOYLE

With U. S. 8th Army, Korea —(P)—There are 110,000 puzzled United Nations soldiers in the grand offensive now underway to seize the northwest corner of the Korean icebox.

They are members of the Eighth army making a drive to the Manchurian border which they hope will end the dreary, five-month-old Korean campaign.

But their puzzlement is as deep as their hopes are high. No soldier really knows what lies ahead. This is as true of commanding generals in the field as it is of the privates who carry out their plans.

Therefore, there are 110,000 men marching forward stonily but cautiously on a journey into doubt. They are like a man moving at twilight through a strange and frozen forest who sees nothing in sight to harm him but uneasily feels the eyes of unseen foes upon him.

Intelligence officers believe that at present there are no more than 100,000 North Korean and Chinese volunteers in the 30 and 60 miles of rugged mountains that lie between the Eighth army and the Yalu river frontier.

The doubt lies in whether that force will be steadily reinforced by scores of thousands of fresh troops brought secretly across the border at night as volunteers. And on that critical point there is a new Chinese wall — a will of Chinese silence.

This uncertainty is peculiarly exasperating to the military mind. Commanders don't like to commit their own troops to battle until they are pretty sure that the enemy is trying to do and what he is capable of doing. And there are those who believe that if Red China does cross the Manchurian border in power and the current attack by 110,000 soldiers will turn out to be merely one of the largest patrol actions in history.

Frankly I don't know what will happen," a general said. We don't have enough here to deal with the troops the Chinese can send across the border if they want to."

Here are some other reactions by American officers and men: A chief of staff in a forward command post — I have been looking at maps all my life, but the map on this operation doesn't tell me a damn thing of what I want to know."

A colonel — This is a problem now for diplomats, not soldiers. The striped pants boys are going to have to find a rabbit to pull out of this hat."

A major — The Chinese will try to tie us up here and bleed us to death. That's what the Russians want them to do."

A young lieutenant — I have been wounded twice in this campaign and I feel my luck won't last a third time. But I'm a professional soldier and that's the chance we take. If they want a real war it might as well start now."

A philosophic private — Hell, better to freeze going forward than to freeze sitting on your rump waiting for the Chinese to make up their minds."

One military analyst put the military situation this way: There are three possibilities — First, the enemy can pull its general staff back across the border and let its troops fight awhile and then take to the hills as guerrillas. That's what they did when we made the breakthrough last September and they may do it again.

Second, the Chinese can send across enough men to knock our heads off.

Third, they now have 100,000 men in good defensive terrain against our 110,000 men. If they are well led and supplied they can keep us pushing and tugging all winter. And that's what I think they will at least try to do."

But most of the troops are more optimistic. They feel that diplomatic decisions are in the making at high levels. Despite the cold weather their morale is high. They are glad the lull is over and that they are on the march again toward a real goal.

And they have a great faith in Gen. Douglas MacArthur. They feel that he is the Santa Claus in uniform who will lead them to final victory by Christmas.

The National Geographic Society says a third of South Africa's white population centers around Johannesburg.

UN Advances But Right Flank Shoved Back by Attacking Red Forces

Favors Wherry for Important Committee

Washington, Nov. 25 —(P)—Senator Butler (R-Neb.), who is going to have a lot to say about Republican committee appointments in the 82nd congress, suggested today that Senator Wherry (R-Neb.) be named to the senate foreign relations committee.

Wherry is the senate Republican floor leader and an outspoken foe of administration foreign policy in Europe and the Far East. He was one of the first Republicans to demand that Secretary of State Acheson be fired. He told reporters in Omaha yesterday that the most important job ahead of the 82nd congress would be Acheson's removal from office.

Butler is chairman of the Republican committee on committees which has an authoritative voice in making assignments.

I think Wherry would be a good man on the foreign relations committee," Butler volunteered to reporters, adding that he had not talked to his colleague about it.

A 7 to 6 realignment of the committee, now named 8 to 5 in favor of the Democrats, will give the republicans one much-sought-after foreign relations job in the new congress. Butler disclosed that he has received six or eight applications and predicted a battle for the post.

Until now, Wherry's name has not figured prominently in the advance discussion which has centered largely around two West Coast senators, Morse of Oregon and Knowland of California.

Among Democrats, meanwhile, there was talk about Senator McMahon of Connecticut will be among the front-runners when the time comes to name a successor to Senate Democratic Leader Lucas of Illinois, defeated for reelection.

Senators McFarland of Arizona and O'Mahoney of Wyoming have been most frequently mentioned for the job. Senator Russell of Georgia, who also figured in the early speculation, has spread the word that he is not interested.

Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) disclosed that he is inclined towards McMahon as leader, saying he is young and vigorous. In a separate interview, Senator Douglas (D-Ill.) included McMahon's name with that of O'Mahoney as his choice for the leadership.

Most Southern Democrats are more inclined towards McFarland because of his voting record on civil rights and related issues. Northern Democrats, like Douglas, who favor President Truman's civil rights program, would prefer someone more sympathetic to administration objectives.

Self-Control Favored by Business

Washington, Nov. 25 —(P)—Moves to curb inflation by industry and labor self-control, rather than by strict government regulation, appeared in the making today.

A select group of top business and labor leaders were reported planning a secret meeting in New York next Tuesday with that idea in mind.

Two of those reported invited are involved in one of the biggest union-industry struggles of the day, the wage increase drive in the steel industry. These men are John Stephens, vice president of the U. S. Steel Corp., and Philip Murray, head of the CIO and its steelworkers union.

Arrangements for the New York meeting were kept secret. But it was reported industry had suggested it and, along with Murray, such leaders of labor as AFL President William Green and John L. Lewis, chief of the miner's union, are to attend.

The main purpose of the meeting was said to be an effort to achieve wage-price stability by voluntary means while going ahead with full civilian production and employment and still continuing the big defense build-up.

In the meantime, two Democratic senators spoke out in favor of pushing the fight against inflation with higher taxes and stiffer credit curbs before turning to wage-price controls.

A chemical solution brushed on girdled trees now is used to loosen the bark so the trees may be harvested for pulp at any time.

Tokyo, Nov. 25 —(P)—United Nations forces rammed ahead toward the Red Manchurian border in the northwest offensive today, but their extreme right flank was shoved back by counterattacking Reds.

Gains on the winding 80-mile front ranged up to six miles, with Chongju falling to the Americans on the left flank of the concerted drive. But on the extreme east flank, strong Communist forces plunged six miles into South Korean positions.

The scrap on the right flank of the northwest front contrasted with the absence of opposition on the extreme left flank. There the high-way hub of Chongju fell to a tank-led task force of the U. S. 24th division without a fight.

Chongju is 51 road miles south of the Yalu river border city of Chiniui, main gateway for Chinese Communists entering the war. Patrols of the 24th struck north two miles outside Chongju toward Ku-sung.

In that sector there was no resistance.

Earlier Saturday, the offensive was dealt another, but minor, setback in the center of the line, in the Taechon area, 22 miles north-east of Chongju and on the 24th right flank the South Korean first division was pushed back one mile and a half.

There the Reds pierced the line only temporarily. They struck in the predawn darkness, but were hurried back in the daylight hours. All along the line, B-29 Superfortresses and fighters supported the U. N. drive.

The South Koreans are heading toward the great Sulho dam on the Yalu upstream from Sinuiju. Fourth largest in the world, Sulho dam supplies hydro-electric power for most of Manchuria and North Korea. Most of the Red resistance is expected in that sector.

An Eighth army spokesman said the offensive generally exceeded planning expectations. With General MacArthur personally signaling the kick-off, the push began Friday morning after a prolonged lull and rumors of peace.

On the snow-mantled northeast front, the ROK Capital division thrust to the edge of Chongju, major North Korean city south of the Soviet Siberian border 60 air miles away.

U. S. marine and carrier-based planes supported the ROK Capital division and allied forces elsewhere in the Northeast.

But it was on the northwest push that MacArthur was pinning his hopes for ending the war by Christmas. Here's how that push progressed: On the west end of the line, an unopposed tank-led task force of the 24th division seized hills overlooking Chongju on the eastern outskirts. The Americans were preparing to enter the city at noon Saturday.

Other elements of the 24th, advancing west of Pakchon on the right flank, reported destroying a Russian Stalin III tank, a Russian-built model weighing nearly 60 tons. It was the first such official designation of a giant Red tank in Korea, although GIs early in the war reported seeing mammoth tanks. Later, however, they encountered only the T-34 medium tank. Hundreds were destroyed.

UN Council Due to Grapple With Formosa Issue

Lake Success, Nov. 25 —(P)—A Chinese Communist spokesman waiting to state its case against American aggression in the Nations security council today to grapple with the Korean and Formosa problems.

The 3 p. m. (EST) session was ordered unexpectedly by President Acheson after U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie called the Chinese Communist spokesman who arrived in New York yesterday.

It previously had been expected that the council would meet before next Tuesday at Lake Success, N. Y., to discuss the Korean and the Chinese Communist claim of U. S. aggression in Formosa on the council seemed to have some special importance.

The Chinese Communist spokesman, agreeing to send a delegate to Lake Success to participate in discussion of Gen. MacArthur's charges of Chinese intervention in Korea, has insisted that the U. S. Government must first remove its troops from Formosa and the United States must agree to both territories.

Formosa, the spokesman said, is the strongest of the U. N. states, and the U. S. Government must first remove its troops from Formosa and the United States must agree to both territories.

Age

We all dread age and put up the best light we can against it. We undergo martyrdoms of starvation for the sake of our waistlines that we would not suffer for any principle. Wild horses could not drag from us the secret of the number of birthdays we have celebrated, and there is no compliment we esteem so lightly as to be told we look young, and no insult that we resent so bitterly as being called old. If given our choice of what age we would like to be, we would remain perpetually in the 20's. In fact, many women remain a static 28 for years and years and years, and perhaps none of us ever go over the top of the 30's without a little cold chill in our hearts and the feeling that we are leaving the best of life behind us. For a superstition has grown up about youth that we believe in as devoutly and with as little basis in fact as babes do in Santa Claus, that causes us to think that youth is a period of unalloyed with high spirits, and that as we grow older we pass from this smiling land of sunshine into one where there is nothing but trials and tribulations and where we have even lost our power of enjoyment. We can recall how, when we were in our teens, we pitied the aged people in their 30's who had nothing left in the way of pleasures and amusements and how, when we were in our 30's we wondered that anybody could even desire to live beyond 60. Sympathy Misplaced As we grow older, however, we find out that this sympathy is misplaced, and that it is not youth that should pity us, but age that should pity youth. For, to quote Browning's phrase, "the best of life is the last, for which the first was made." For it takes us half a lifetime to learn how to live. Youth isn't the happiest time of life. It is the most miserable because we have then no perspective, no sense of value. We have not found out that nothing lasts; we have not found out that there is a law of compensation that always works, and we have not acquired a philosophy with which to meet the disappointments of existence. The things that we laugh at later in life are heart-breaking tragedies to the young. If a boy and girl cannot go to a party to which all the other youngsters of their set are going, they feel that it is no use trying to live in a world so filled with disappointments. We older ones shrug our shoulders and know that there will always be plenty of parties, and if we can't go to one tonight there will be a better one tomorrow night. The self-conscious girl and boy endure agonies of shame if they cannot have the latest thing in clothes. They feel that all eyes are upon them and that every tongue is commenting on them. We older folks know how unimportant we are, and that everybody is so concerned with their own affairs that they don't even notice us. The most disgraced woman in the world is not more humiliated than the girl who has not a date for the football games or who is a wallflower at the ball. No man who ever sees his ambitions crash in ruins about him is more disappointed than the boy who can't even buy a second-hand Ford. And it is one of the compensations of age that we are spared so many of the minor afflictions of life, and that we learn to make substitutes for the things we want and can't get. We Must Learn to Enjoy Things Youth thinks that age has no enjoyment, but, in reality, it takes age to teach us how to enjoy. Youth gulps down pleasure as a hungry man does food, caring only that there be a lot of it. But age savors pleasure as a gourmet does a feast, appreciating every delicate flavor, every surprise in taste, every vintage of the wine. Once I went on a long journey to far lands with a number of girls and boys. At first I was curious of them, thinking how wonderful it was that they had the privilege of seeing historic and romantic places while they were young and having all this knowledge, these memories to cherish their lives. But it was not long before I discovered that I was getting a hundredfold more out of the trip than they were because they had not lived long enough to know what it was all about. Places that to me were

Human Failure Causes Most Train Wrecks

By MAX HALL (For James Marlow)

Washington, Nov. 25 — (AP) — "Human failure" is being blamed for Wednesday's horrible collision on the Long Island railroad. The fact is, "human failure" has caused more than three-fourths of America's major train wrecks. Broken rails and flood waters caused lots of them, but more commonly the disaster could be traced directly to the failure of some human being to see a signal, or to read an order carefully, or to obey a rule. Sometimes there were indirect contributing causes, such as the failure of a railroad to have an adequate block signal system. The bureau of safety, at the interstate commerce commission, was created in 1911 and has investigated every major railroad accident since that year. Yesterday I asked the bureau to dig out the reports on all the accidents in which 25 or more persons were killed. They handed me 29 reports. A study of these reports shows that: Nine of the accidents were caused primarily by an engineer's failure to operate in accordance with signals. Four were caused primarily by failure to obey train orders three by failure to put out proper protective signals after a train stopped unexpectedly; three by excessive speed on curves three by flood damage to the track two by broken rails two by the driving of motor vehicles across the tracks; one by a broken part one by a train crew's taking their train out on the main track in the mistaken belief that an oncoming train had already gone by and one by failure of railroad officials to enforce essential safety rules. In several of the 29 reports the ICC recommended that the railroad install better equipment in order to make human and mechanical failures less likely. Though it is often possible to discover that a train wreck was due to human failing, it is a much harder job to discover what caused the human failing. ICC officials admit they have not had much success with that. In the first place, the men involved are frequently killed in the wreck. For example, the engineer of the second train in this week's Long Island disaster was killed. It was his train that collided with the rear of another train stalled on the track. And if the men who are involved survive the wreck, they are often under criminal charges and are reluctant to talk freely. Between 1911 and this week's disaster, the four greatest train wrecks — in number of deaths — all took place in either 1918 or 1943. The most disastrous of all occurred at Nashville, Tenn., on July 9, 1918. Two passenger trains on the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, each traveling about 50 miles an hour, collided head-on. ICC officials say 101 persons were killed. They add that an almanac figure of 115 deaths if incorrect. The Nashville wreck is believed to have had the greatest death toll in U. S. history, though not the greatest in the Western hemisphere. In 1927 a train plunged off a high trestle in Costa Rica, killing about 300 excursionists. The ICC reported that in the Nashville wreck one of the trains had no business entering the main track until its crew was positive that the other had passed — another case of human failure. Only 17 days before the Nashville collision, 68 persons on a Hagenback-Wallace circus train had been killed at Ivanhoe, Ind. The circus train stopped for a blazing hot box and another train, whose engineer was drowsing, plowed into its rear. The wooden cars were set afire, probably by oil lamps, and many were burned to death. Here are the two great disasters of 1943: On Sept. 8, the Congressional Limited of the Pennsylvania railroad was going 56 miles an hour at Frankford Junction, just north of Philadelphia, when it was derailed by a broken journal (end of an axle) 79 dead. On Dec. 16, the last three cars of an Atlantic coast line train were derailed near Rennett, N. C., because of a broken rail. This was not disastrous, but two of the cars produced slightly over an adjacent track, and 40 minutes later another train going 80 miles an hour struck the two cars and rocketed off the track, 72 dead.

Flynn Faces Accuser in Court

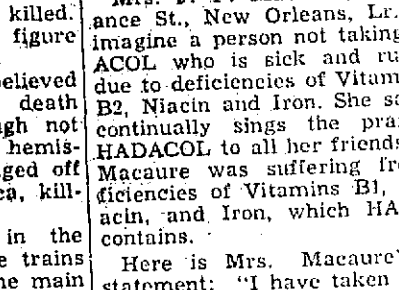

Monte Carlo, Nov. 25 — (AP) — Movie Star Errol Flynn appeared before an examining magistrate today along with the teen-age girl who accused him of raping her. Flynn has said the charges are intended only as black mail. The girl has been identified as Danielle D. The alleged offense occurred on Flynn's yacht off the Riviera last year. At that time the girl was 15. Flynn and his recent bride Patricia Wymore came ashore for the hearing from the screen star's yacht in Monte Carlo harbor. Patricia waited outside in the automobile. The girl's parents seek 1,000,000 francs (12,800) damages. They say they will give the money — if it is awarded — to charity.

Appeal for Blood Donations for Steamboat Harry

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 25 — (AP) — An appeal for blood donations was made today for Harry (Steamboat) Johnson, supervisor of southern association umpires. Johnson, about 70, is suffering from abdominal ailments. He has been in Baptist hospital for about a month and a half. One operation has been performed and another may be needed. His condition is termed serious.

Cliff Shaw to Appear in Grid Picture

Little Rock, Nov. 25 — (AP) — Cliff Shaw, president of the Arkansas Officials' association and member of the national rules committee, has been named a game official for a new high school football picture being made by the Official Sports Film Service. The picture is sanctioned by the national federation high school athletic executive board. Shaw has left for Mesa, Ariz., where the picture will be filmed from Nov. 27 to Dec. 2.

Mrs. J. P. Macaure, 408 Radiance St., New Orleans, La., can't imagine a person not taking HADACOL who is sick and run-down due to deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron. She says she continually sings the praises of HADACOL to all her friends. Mrs. Macaure was suffering from deficiencies of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin, and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Mrs. Macaure's own statement: "I have taken at least 5 bottles of HADACOL. Before I took HADACOL I was very nervous. My family was affected, too, because I was so irritable. Then my sister suggested I take HADACOL and I started taking it immediately. After the second bottle I felt like I had taken all the troubles of the world off my shoulders. My nerves are now as steady as ever. My family thinks HADACOL is wonderful because my disposition is 100% better and I am not the least bit irritable. That's because I had ways have a bottle of HADACOL on the kitchen shelf. HADACOL is the most wonderful product on the market."

Give HADACOL A Chance to help you. If your system lacks these essential elements, you, too, will be amazed at the wonderful results HADACOL can bring you, as it has to thousands of other fine folks who suffered a deficiency of Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains. HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when iron is needed) to carry these precious Vitamins and Minerals to every organ, and every part of your body. HADACOL is that wonderful new preparation—promising blessed relief for your indigestion, stomach disturbances (gas, heartburn, sour "risings" after meals), as well as that general run-down condition, and nagging aches and pains, if due to a lack of Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin in your system.

HADACOL is so amazingly successful because if your system lacks Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin it acts directly to relieve this deficiency — the real cause of your trouble. That's the kind of product you want — the kind you should buy — the kind you should start taking immediately.

Only One Genuine HADACOL Don't go through life suffering nagging aches and pains if caused by such deficiencies when relief may be as close at hand as the nearest drugstore for sufferers from these deficiencies. Buy HADACOL today. Trial size bottle only $1.25. Large family or hospital size, $3.50. Refuse substitutes. There's only one true and genuine HADACOL.

Conway Sheriff Succumbs to Heart Attack

Conway, Nov. 25 — (AP) — Folkner county Sheriff Jack C. Castleberry died suddenly last night after attending the Van Buren-Conway football game. Castleberry, who was to have begun his third term as sheriff and collector next January 1, was stricken soon after returning home from the game and was dead on arrival at a hospital. Coroner Robert C. McNutt said death was due to coronary thrombosis — a blood clot in the heart. A native Greenbrier, Castleberry attended Beebe Junior agricultural college and formerly was with the soil conservation service and state highway department. He served four years as deputy before his election as sheriff. He was renominated in the first Democratic primary last summer, defeating four opponents, and re-
